HONEST POLICEMAN CAN'T PAY ALIMONY ON $93.50 A MONTH

So Argues a Much-Married Bluecoat in Answering Wife's Demands.

The honest policeman cannot afford to pay alimony, declares Francis Manning, a Kingsbridge bluecoat, whose wife, Kate, has brought a suit for separation in the Supreme Court. Mrs. Manning, who is the policeman's second wife, asked Justice McCall for $12 a week alimony for her support and the maintenance of an infant born last February. With his affidavit Manning incorporates an interesting tabulation of how his $12.50 a month is spent and says: "It is respectfully submitted that an honest policeman finds it impossible to make anything more than his salary." His figures show that he has a monthly deficit of $15.50, despite the fact that he places a huge "0" in the column opposite the item "Allowance for entertainments and other mental distractions." The tabulation follows: Salary less 2 per cent. for Pension fund..... $93.50 Board and lodging for defendant's two children, Anne and Marion, and lodging for defendant at No. 122 East Eighth street, per month..... 40.00 Defendant's daily meals per month..... 22.00 Station house expenses, domestic housekeeper's charges, bootblack, &c., per month..... 5.00 Monthly dues to benevolent associations..... 5.00 New winter overcoat and uniform as provided by the rules of the Police Department by arrangement made to pay tailor per month..... 5.00 Casualty clothing for defendant's two children per month..... 13.00 Monthly installment on furniture purchased..... 10.00 Storage of this furniture per month..... 4.00 Civilian clothes, shoes, socks and underwear and other wearing apparel for defendant per month..... 5.00 Allowance for luxuries such as cigars, entertainments, and other mental distractions..... 0.00 Total..... $109.00 Total income..... 93.50 Monthly deficit..... $15.50 N. B.—Deduct half pay for any sick days.

The Mannings were married in June, 1911. They lived at No. 1073 Park avenue. Within a few days after their

BULL MOOSETTES FOR 'TEDDY' BOOTH IN LEAGUE BAZAAR

Lillian Russell One of the Rebels in the Professional Women's Row.

No, the Bull Moose is not dead, nor even taking the count. At the last meeting of the executive committee of the Professional Women's League he entered into their conference with his usual strenuousness and the usual conflict followed. Is there or is there not to be a Bull Moose booth at the approaching bazaar to be held in the League rooms at No. 190 Broadway, Dec. 12? There was another meeting today. The estimable and talented members of the League are in high dudgeon. Feminine voices in shrill soprano and more sopororous contraltos are hurling forth defiance, while daintily, delicately gloved hands are clenched in hysterical anger and thumped on the clubroom tables, emphasizing pros and cons in the terrible warfare.

COAT BURNED OFF BACK OF DARING POLICEMAN

Loses Hair Also While Helping Four Volunteer Companies Fight Long Island Fire.

The four volunteer fire companies of Elmhurst and Corona had their hands full with a spectacular blaze that was discovered at 3 o'clock A. M. today in the rear of the Flushing Road Hotel at Flushing road and Hall avenue, midway between Corona and North Beach. The hotel, owned by Louis Klepe, a bare attachment to the hotel and a barn and carriage house belonging to Frank Hill, which adjoined the hotel, all went up in smoke. Mrs. Klepe discovered the fire when she was roused from sleep by the smell of smoke. She found one of the small wings in the rear of the building ablaze and telephoned to the home of Fire Chief Webber in Corona. Before the Corona and Elmhurst companies could arrive the fire had communicated to the two barns and the carriage house and threatened the frame Public School No. 19 half a block away. Mounted Policeman Cavanaugh, attached to the Long Island City mounted squad, did heroic work in leading six horses from one of the barns. His coat was burned from his back and he lost most of his hair in running through the fire. The loss is estimated at $10,000.

HER MURDER CONFESSION NOT ENOUGH TO CONVICT.

Judge Instructs Jury to Acquit Woman, Because Her Story Was Not Corroborated.

REDALE, Mo., Nov. 27.—"Not guilty," was the verdict returned by the jury today in the case of Mrs. Percy Ellen Leach, charged with the murder of Mrs. Elizabeth M. Quintance of Green Ridge, Mo. Judge Shain instructed the jury to acquit the woman on the ground that her confession she had made was not backed by corroborative evidence.

And what is a Bull Moose booth? asked the staid Mrs. Neiderlinger, taking the floor. "Why—why—a Bull Moose booth—la—la—a Bull Moose booth," stammered pretty Miss Marcell, for a moment flustered by the hostile tone of Mrs. Neiderlinger. "And what are you going to have in it?" asked another anti-Bull Moose member. "Teddy himself, I suppose, and charge admission for the public to go in and look him over. Good idea! Perhaps he would consent to sell autographed photographs. Perfectly ridiculous!"
